Description

Five separate images emphasizing the use of adobe in New Mexico. The top image features an old (1940s) pickup truck and a barn. The second image features a lone pitched roof house with a large triangular hill behind it. The left image features the raw dirt used for adobe; a shovel lays on top. The right image is a set of hands working in the dirt. The bottom image is a close up of an adobe wall that has a crack running through it at center.
