Description

A large river flowing through a valley is the focal point of the image. The river curves to the left into a strong bend at the central part of the image and then continues off to the lower right corner. The river is highlighted in the background, giving it a shiny appearance. In the background are rugged mountain peaks covered in snow. The largest peak is on the right side on the image. Above the peaks, the sky is partially cloudy with rays of light sneaking through.
